Dear Prospective Doctoral Student,

Thank you for your interest in the Doctorate of Education in Organizational Studies at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio. We are pleased to offer this doctoral program that provides an interdisciplinary approach to the study of theories and research critical to the success of leaders in a variety of organization settings.

Pursuing doctoral-level work can be a challenging but also a very rewarding experience. The Department of Leadership Studies in Education & Organizations is seeking professionals who work in education, community, government, public services, business, and non-profit organizations to pursue this degree. We are recruiting individuals who desire to be strong practitioners focused on improving organizations and conducting research to inform practice.

To be admitted into the program, applicants must have a Master's degree in a related field, with a 3.0 cumulative GPA or higher, from an accredited university. For a full list of documents required as a part of application for this program, please refer to the Ed.D. in Organizational Studies Handbook, which can be accessed at this site:
